What do just about all restaurants have in common? Tables, chairs, cooks in the kitchen, servers, and menus all make a whole lot of sense... without those, the place wouldn't really be able to call itself a restaurant. But what about the bread? Even though some restaurants have started charging for it, just about every sit-down restaurant will bring you bread at some point between sitting ...

While one piece of white bread probably won't go straight to your hips, eating too much may lead to weight gain. What's more, research shows that choosing refined grains such as white bread, rice and pasta could make you more likely to pack on unwanted fat than eating whole grains such as whole-wheat bread or pasta or brown rice.
